LABOR PROBLEMS DISCUSSED

Economists and Others in Session at Minneapolis-Herman Justi, Commissioner of Illinois Coal Operators' Association, Advances Ideas.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Sept. 23 .- Unsual interest was manifested in the proceedings of the second day's session of the national convention of Employers and Employes.

Herman Justi, commissioner of Illinois Coal Operators' Association, read an interesting paper on "Arbitration; its Uses and Abuses," He said that the matters, having been connected with the word "arbitration" was little understood, and that to the popular mind its very novelty places a dangerous glamour about it. Wise labor leaders and thoughtful employers of labor view it alike with apprehension.

"Any plan of settling labor disputes that is labeled 'arbitration' seems to INVESTIGATION SHOWS catch the popular fancy," the commissioner said, "but as in all other matters, those who are ignorant of the issue involved and understand the question least, are the very persons who discuss it most, and who are most insistent upon its adoption for everything. With the masses arbitration is the first thought, while with those who are constautly dealing with labor disputes, it is the last resort. Says Arbitration Is Dangerous. Mr. Justi said that arbitration should ever be resorted to save in an extremity, and that the energy and interest displayed in advocating its generaladoption could be better applied to all those simpler and more practical plans and methods of adjustment designed to render arbitration unnecessary.

shift is an absurdity, utterly useless as a means of promoting industrial peace, and mischievous in its consequences. It must also be just as clear that arbitration is equally acceptable to employer and employe when both believe some thing is to be gained by it, and it meets with equal opposition when there is a mutual conviction of impending loss.
